An Extract of a Letter from the HAGUE.

IT's the Opinion of most People here, that the Accommodation between the Queen of Hungary and the King of Prussia is upon the Point of being concluded, which, 'tis hoped, will re-establish the Affairs of the Grand Duke of Tuscany in the Empire, where they are every where perplex'd; insomuch, that notwithstanding the wise Zeal of the Elector of Mentz, who every Body commends, this Prince runs great Risque of failing to obtain the Imperial Crown, of which however it must be own'd he is very worthy. If the first Offers of the King of Prussia had been accepted of, Things would not have fallen into the Condition they are now in. Here is handed about two little Treatises, one on the Side of the King of Poland, Elector of Saxony, entituled, An impartial Examination whether the transferring the Vote of Bohemia is founded upon the Laws of the Empire, &c. The other is a Resolution, from the fundamental Laws of the Empire, and of the Rescript dated at Vienna the 20th of December, 1740. The first is design'd to prove, that neither the Queen of Hungary, Duke of Lorrain, nor the States of Bohemia, can exercise this Vote, which Prerogative appertains only to the nearest Male Heir, that is to say, to him who would inherit the Crown of Bohemia in default of Descendants from the Archdutchesses, and their Posterity. The Duke of Lorrain is therein treated as a foreign Prince; and it is in this Pamphlet advanc'd that the Co Regence which the Queen has given him, should not put him in so dazzling a Light as to be the Means of placing him upon the Imperial Throne; because should the Queen die before him, the Succession would go still in the Order of the Pragmatick Sanction, and the Empire would find at it's Head an Emperor without Wealth or Dominions, and who could not of himself support the Pomp of the Imperial Dignity. The other Tract tends to prove, that the Crown of Bohemia being upon the Head of a Woman, the Electoral Functions and Prerogatives remain suspended, tho' the Dignity subsists; and will not therefore allow that the next Heir Male in that Case has a Right to vote at the Election of an Emperor, or that this is the Purport of the Golden Bull Hamburgh, April 7. The following is a Copy of the King of Prussia's Rescript, contain'd in the Memorial presented at Mentz by the Baron de Danckelman.

" Notwithstanding the Moderation which I have hitherto shewn to the Court of Vienna, and tho' I have from time to time taken all imaginable Steps, and made the most friendly Overtures towards coming to an Accommodation, and putting an End to the Differences which subsist between me and the House of Austria, which has in it's Power to cause them to cease whenever it will, by doing me Justice, in Regard to my incontestible Right; the same Conduct has not been shewn in respect to me at Vienna. They seem to forget there the Attention which is owing from one sovereign Power to another, even in Time of War; and they treat me with so little Decency, and in so unworthy a Manner, as well in Writings publish'd by the Court, as from the Mouth of its Ministers, that there is no Example of Rage been carried to such a Length.

Accustom'd however to the haughty Behaviour of the Court of Vienna, and to the little Regard that it shews for other Powers, even in Time of Peace? I have hitherto contemn'd this Way of acting, unknown amongst polite Nations, who are used to keep a certain Decency in the warmest Quarrels: But they have not thought themselves oblig'd at Vienna to keep the least Shadow of it with me; and without any Regard to the Laws of War, observ'd by the most barbarous People, they have betaken themselves to the most detestible Means, and have even made Use of Emissaries, Spies, and Banditti, to watch my Steps, and to seize upon my Person, and even to betray me to the Enemy's Parties. What is the most shocking of all these Horrors, is, that one of these Banditti, has confess'd, that he was oblig'd, in the Presence of the Duke of Lorrain, in the Aulick Council of War, to take an Oath for that Purpose, which I have, nevertheless great Difficulty to believe. I own that I am much concern'd for the Sake of the Duke of Lorrain, whom I could not have thought capable of permitting such Indignities, which in the Eyes of the whole World ought to cover the Court of Vienna with Shame and Confusion.

'Tis with Regret that I am forced to publish Things so little worthy the Name of the House of Austria, and Authors of so damnable an Attempt; but all this, being unhappily but too true, and too well attested, I believ'd, &c."

Extract of a Letter from on board the Stamboline, Capt. Hayes.

ON Saturday March 8, being in the Latitude 49, 39, the Man at the Mast Head cried a Sail, who bore down upon us, we knowing our Ship to sail best upon a Wind, hoped he would not come up with us; but to our Misfortune he sail'd three foot to our one: I consulted Captain Bulmore what we had best to do; his Answer was that we could not get clear of him, and must make ready to engage. When first we saw him he hoisted English Colours, and sometimes bore away, and other times hawl'd upon a Wind; at last he bore down for our Starboard Quarter; we then came to a Resolution, that I should hoist a blue Ensign, Jack and Pennant, and hawl my Courses up; when I hail'd him he made no Answer, but hoisted a Spanish Ensign, and gave me an exceeding warm Salute of small Arms and Cannon without the least Intermission for a Quarter of an Hour; we returned him the same, and gave him three Huzzas; he then shot a little a Head, but soon after boarded me. The Greeks I had on board declared for the Spaniards, and three others would would not fight at all; our Surgeon had a Shot above his Temple, and was cut with a Cutlaſs from his Ear to his Noſe; the Armourer had his Hand taken off by a Granado Shell, another his Skull fractured and his private Parts ſhot off; in the whole I had 15 killed and wounded. Thoſe who ſtood by the Ship behaved themſelves with undaunted Courage and Reſolution; however having ſo many killed and wounded, the Greeks &c refuſing to fight, and ſix Boys on board, we were taken, with our Colours flying; the Lieutenant of the Privateer cut my Colours down, and threatned to cut me in Pieces for not ſtriking. They plundered and ſtrip'd us naked, and then gave us what Rags they pleaſed. They had three killed, four knocked over-board in boarding, and thirty wounded; his fore-top-ſail Yard and Jibb-boom was ſhot away, and a ſix-Pounder through his Fore-maſt. The next Morning the Captain came on board me, and took all my Letters and Papers; we lay too all Sunday to repair, and on Monday about Eleven in the Morning, we ſaw a Sail bear down on us, as ſhe came near we made her to be a large Ship on which the Spaniards were much confuſed.

I then had 14 Men in Irons, and 13 at Liberty; I told the Men in Irons that if I made her to be an Engliſh Ship, I would give them Notice to riſe, which they did on the approach of the Colcheſter Man of War, as it prov'd: As ſoon as I was certain what ſhe was, I went on the Quarter Deck and demanded the Spaniards Arms, which they deliver'd, by which time the Colcheſter hail'd our Ship, &c.

BOSTON, June 29.

The following Extracts of Letters found on board the French Sloop lately brought into Rhode-Iſland by Capt. Davidſon, and condemned there as lawful Prize, give ſo much Light into the Deſigns of the French Fleet lately gone to Europe from the Weſt-Indies, that we cannot but think they will be acceptable to our Readers.

Extract of a Letter from Mr. La Martier, Feb. 15. 1741.

---FOUR of our Ships have had an Engagement with 6 Engliſh Men of War; the Fight was in the Night and laſted 6 Hours, and in the Morning the Engliſh Commodore ſent and excuſed himſelf to ours, and ſaid he took them for Spaniards. This Affair coſt us an hundred Men.

From one of the Voluntiers, Decemb. 16. 1740.

My dear Father,

WE arrived here at the Keys of St. Lewis off St. Domingo, 5 Weeks ago, and we don't yet know how much longer we are to ſtay. Mr. De la Rochalart having ſtaid ſo long, that 'tis believed the Blow has failed. Mr. d'Antin ſaid the other Day, that the Thing was given over, and did not expect any Thing would be done. ---- Jabair Mortagre.

Extract of a Letter from the Chevalier Du Caſtet to his Kinſman in Martinico, from on board the Triton at Guadaloupe, Dec. 30. 1740.

---THE King of France has made a very great Armament this Year. He has equip'd at Breſt 24 Ships of War, commanded by the Marquis d' Antin, Vice-Admiral, and 12 at Toulon, under Commodore Mr. De la Rochalart. We remain'd in Harbour from June to September, when Mr. d' Antin came to ſail with his Squadron for St. Domingo: That from Toulon join'd it off the Canaries, that of the Count de Roquefeuil (in which I am) having followed them till we came off St. Vincent's, had Orders to return to Breſt; we remain'd there 'till the 20th November, when we had Orders to join the Marquis d'Antin. It is a long Time ſince there was ſuch a ſtrong Squadron in America, as 26 French Ships of War: It is no longer doubted it is to convoy the Galleons to Europe, that we are come into America. I will tell you, Mr. d'Antin has Orders to attack the Engliſh Squadron at Jamaica under Admiral Vernon, and even to purſue them in order to an Engagement. You ſee my dear Couſins, that a War between France and England is certain.---

---KNow then, dear Father, 'tis only Providence which ſupports us. We have no more Victuals than juſt ſufficient to keep us from ſtarving. It would fill two Sheets of Paper to acquaint you with all our Miſeries. We have however a Pound of Meat a Week. The Ships loſe a great many Men: The Report is, they are going back to France, which troubles me very much. Other Reports ſay, we are going to attack Jamaica, where there is 21 Men of War and 3 Forts waiting for us: But Mr. de Fourneau came on board yeſterday, which was the firſt of January, and told us, that in 15 Days we ſhould go back to Martinico.

A Journal of what paſſed from the Day that we * embark'd on board the King's Squadron under the Marquis d'Antin, Vice-Admiral of France.

We embark'd 27th Octob. 1740. on board the King's Ships, and weighed Anchor Saturday 2 o' Clock after Midnight. We made Dominica on Sunday, and were under great Concern to know where we were going; but it was in vain to expect to know the Deſign, for Mr. d' Antin would never tell any one what he was going to do. The Politicks of the Gentlemen are, that if we had met Mr. de la Rochalart at St. Lewis in St. Domingo, as Mr. d'Antin expected, we ſhould have immediately made an Expedition, but he having ſtaid ſo long (being 110 Days on his Paſſage) all the Gentlemen ſaid, the Blow had failed. However, we have been 2 or 3 Times very near fighting. Mr. d'Antin having heard there were 22 Engliſh Men of War at Cape del Marie, he did not, it ſeems, think proper to go and ask them their Buſineſs, being inferior to them in the Number of Ships. We remained 3 Weeks at Anchor at the Keys of St. Lewis, then cruiſed on the South Coaſt of the Iſland 5 Days, and then anchored at St. Lewis the reſt of the Time. We have had ſuch violent Sickneſs among us, as to bury 15 or 16 of the Sailors and Soldiers in a Day.--- It is reckoned there are 300 dead in the ſpace of 2 Months, and more than 500 ſick. More than 10 Officers have had the ſame Fate. We have buried 2 Captains of Men of War. There are at leaſt 40 of our Inhabitants ſick, and 2 Voluntiers at the Point of Death. --- The Report is, that Mr. de Roquefeuil is coming with a Squadron of 8 Ships, and 3 Months Proviſion for all the Fleet. Mr. d'Antin has procured from the Spaniſh Part of the Iſland, 150 Oxen, and 35 or 40 are killed every Day.---

The following Account of the Storming Fort St. Lazarus, is wrote by an Officer in the Maſſachuſetts Troops.

---BEfore I proceed, I muſt give you ſome Deſcription of this Fort. Thus then, it ſtands on a Hill that is as round as an Apple, and of conſiderable Height: The Land clear all round it, is four ſquare, and mounts eight Guns on each ſquare; beſides which, on an equal Line with the Fort on one ſide, was a Faſcine Battery of ten Guns, and on the other another of ſix, and before the Fort a Breaſt-Work of 8 Guns, all which our Men were to eucounter with ſmall Arms only: So march we muſt, and indeed the Officers and Men were forward enough, and thoſe who had the good Hap to ſtay behind, thought themſelves ill uſed; of which Number I was one, commanding in the Reſerve. Well, march they did, and about Day-break arrived ſo near that they were diſcovered, and the Cannon from all Parts play'd upon them: And one Thing that we never imagined was, that we were open to the City, who poured in Patridge-ſhot in abundance upon us. However, our Men nothing diſcouraged, march'd as brave as ever any Romans could, and drove our Enemies out of their Breaſt-Works and Faſcine Batteries, with great Slaughter of them, and being prepared with ſcaling Ladders, advanced to the Walls of the Fort, and reared their Ladders. But alas! they were 8 or 9 Foot too ſhort, or I believe we had carried all. What after this could keep our Men I can't tell, but they continued firing at the Stone-Wall more than an Hour after thls. I was an Eye-Witneſs to the whole Affair, having planted my ſelf on a mounted Cannon, where I could ſee all that paſs'd. At laſt, our People finding nothing to be done, drop'd off, bringing the wounded Men, &c.

Extract of a Letter from an Officer belonging to Admiral Vernon's Fleet, dated at Jamaica the 25th of May laſt, via New-York.

---IT was not poſſible to attempt the Town by Ships, the Water being Shoal at too great a Diſtance for the Ships to do Execution, and yet capable of recieving much Injury. After demoliſhing the Forts, deſtroying the Batteries, with the Maſts and Rigging of Ships, and ruining the Cannon, and every Imbarkation but too or three Boats ſecured in the Town, we came away. The Injury done the Spaniards muſt be exceeding great; but the Town would have put the Piaſtres in our Pockets.

Our Cruizers have taken within theſe 6 Weeks 4 or 5 Prizes, of 70 or 80,000l. Sterl. and many Letters from Cadiz, all which are confident that Jamiaca muſt be in the Spaniards Hands e'er now; and the Galleons with all the Treaſure on their Paſſage home under the Care of the united Fleet; no bad Gaſconade. And by a Pacquet from the Dons at the Havannah, to the General of Hiſpaniola; we find the Spaniards are full of Complaints of the French for want of Sincerity.

It is further ſaid and wrote by ſeveral, That the Sailors are generally in Health, and that the Shipping has ſuffered but little Damage; and it is computed, that beſides the Loſs of the Spaniſh Forts and Ships, the Damage done the Town of Carthagena is at leaſt Twelve Millions of Pieces of Eight.

It is alſo ſaid, that there was an unhappy Difference between the General and Admiral, which was daily increaſing. This is nothing ſtrange. All our Expeditions, where Land and Sea-Officers are concerned, are attended with fatal Miſunderſtandings.

It is alſo ſaid, that the Proviſion Fleet was arrived from Ireland, under Convoy of five Men of War.

By a Letter from an Officer on board Admiral Vernon, we are aſſured, that Commodore Anſon was arrived at Arauco in the South-Sea, and the Spaniſh Squadron put back to Buenos Ayres.

We have the following Account from Cambridge, which we think Remarkable, viz. that in one Houſe there live 5 Brothers and Siſters, who are of the following Ages, 75, 77, 77, 83, 85, their Ages put together make 397 Years. No other Perſons live in the ſaid Houſe.

By Letters from London we hear, that the Marquis de Roqueſonme was arrived there from Breſt, he having in a Duel diſpatch'd the Marquis d' Antin, the French Admiral.

* Note, 600 of the Inhabitants of Martinico went as Voluntiers in the Men of War.

NEW-YORK, July 6.

On Friday laſt Five Negroes were executed at the Gallows, two of them died ſeemingly very Penitent, but none of them acknowledg'd any Guilt; but by their Prevarications their Guilt appear'd too plain then to be deny'd. One of them (to the greateſt Surpriſe of the Spectators) after he had hung the common Time, or rather longer, when he was cut down, ſhew'd Symptoms of Life, on which he was tied up again.

And on Saturday one was burnt; at the Stake, he made a Confeſſion and impeach'd ſeveral, and among them ſome Whites, ſome of them are already apprehended; one of the Blacks impeach'd by him at the Stake, as ſoon as he heard himſelf accuſed, went and ſurrendred himſelf, before the Conſtables could have Time to come for him.
